

JONATHAN KILPATRICK

Jonathan Kilpatrick is a seasoned technology leader with over three decades of experience spanning public service, entrepreneurship, and military leadership. As the founder and CEO of Trulight LLC, he provides strategic expertise in Technology Strategy, Regulatory Compliance, and Cyber Security to clients across government and private sectors. His career includes serving as Chief Information Officer for the City of Tallahassee and holding key roles in state government. A Lieutenant Colonel in the Florida Air National Guard, Jonathan currently commands the 125th Communications Squadron at the 125th Fighter Wing in Jacksonville and has held senior leadership positions within Joint Force Headquarters. He also serves as Pastor of St. Marks Baptist Church and was appointed to the Tallahassee Board of Trustees, reflecting his deep commitment to both civic and spiritual leadership.

Born and raised in Opp, Alabama, Jonathan met his wife Donna Boothe there before embarking on a journey that included military service, academic achievement, and a move to Florida. He earned dual bachelor's degrees in mathematics and computer information science from Troy University, followed by an MBA in 2004. They have called Wakulla County home for over 30 years, raising two children—Jacob and Cowen—who both graduated from Tallahassee State College and Florida State University. Today, he finds joy in his role as "Papa" to five beloved grandchildren: Carsin, Trenton, Addison, Jamie, and Avery. His life reflects a blend of professional excellence, community service, and deep family devotion.